

Long ago, in the land of Persia,
lived a young queen called Esther.
She was beautiful and wise,
but she was also a Jew.

Her husband, the king,
was very rich and powerful.
Whatever he said,
that was the law.

Some people in the kingdom of Persia wanted to kill Jews.
One of these people
was a man called Haman.

Haman thought up a clever plan.
He would trick the king
into making a law
commanding all Jews must die.

But Queen Esther was smart.
When she found out about Haman's plan
she invited Haman to a special meal.
He didn't know that Esther was a Jew.

At the special meal,
Queen Esther told her husband the king,
about Haman's plan.
The king was very angry.

“If you kill the Jews,”
said the king, “then you will have killed my wife!”
Haman was scared.

The king ordered that Haman be killed.
Now the Jews were safe
and Queen Esther was safe too.
