

DAVID and Uriah the Hittite

Print Free: www.lambsongs.co.nz

By Jill Kemp

Illustrated by Richard Gunther

King David was sneaky and selfish, because he wanted to get his own way. He tried to keep what he had done a secret, but God sees and knows everything.

King David didn't want anyone to know that he was the father of Bathsheba's baby. He ordered Uriah home from war to trick him. He wanted Uriah to think the baby was his own.

After asking Uriah about the war, King David said slyly, "Before you go back to fight, take a few days off and relax at home with your wife."

But, Uriah slept outside King David's door. He did not take time off from the army, or go home to his wife. He stayed on guard, to keep the king safe.

"Why don't you go home and sleep with your wife?" the King asked him again. "In a war I am on duty," Uriah said. "I can't please myself, while others are in danger."

King David saw that Uriah was a good man, but now he wanted him dead. "Make sure Uriah is killed in the fighting," he ordered Joab. "Put him right in the front row."

When Bathsheba heard that Uriah had died she was very sad. He had been a good husband and she loved him very much.

Now that her husband was dead, Bathsheba could marry the King. God saw that because of the selfish plans of King David, poor Uriah had been killed.